

After the officer of election asks you for your full legal name and current address, the voter MUST respond by giving (orally or in writing) his/her full legal name and current residence address.

The officer of election will repeat your response in a voice audible to party and candidate representatives present.

Next, the officer will ask you to present a form of identification.

You MUST present any one of the acceptable forms of identification to the officer of election. If you are unable to present one of the acceptable forms of identification, you may only vote a provisional ballot.

You MUST wait until the officer of election acknowledges that your entrance into the polling place is permitted.
